KYRIE ELEISON. In his glory! When the spheres
Lighten with that wonderous blaze,
How shall all my sins and fears
Meet thy dawning, Day of days.

"Nothing hid?" No thought so mean That to darkness it may creep; Very darkness shall be seen, Very death of life shall leap.

Nothing deep, or far, or old; Nothing left, in years behind; All the secret soir unrolled; Light of God! I would be blind!

Only I shall see a Face In the glory lifted up: And a Hand—the Hand of grace Whose sweet mercy held the Cup. And a Voice, I think will speak, Asking of each sin-defilled Whom his saving came to seek, As a mother saks her child:

"Wert thou sorry?"
"Yea, dear Christ.
Slok and sorry have I been,
Wearlly thy ways have missed;
Wash my feet, and lead me in!

Though in this clear light of thine, Sin and sore must stand revealed, Though no stainless health be mine, Count me, Lord, among the heated.

Not with scribe and phariseo Dare I crave an upinest scat; Only, Saviour, suffer me Only, Saylour, suffer me With thy sinvers at thy feet!" From "Daffodils" by Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney

THE HAUNTED CABIN.

In the latter part of the winter of 1878 I was one of a party of eight prospecting for mica along the lower slopes of the great Balsam range in western North Carolina Trapping was an absorbing pastime, and more than one of our boys had developed into quite expert trappers, but none more so than myself. Indeed, my success in this line had gained for me no little reputation. One clear, cold day, with one of the nountaineers as guide and assistant, I left the camp for the purpose of setting ome traps in a different part of the range from any yet visited.

After a long and tedious tramp through dense jumgles, and many arduous climbs up precipitious slopes and down again, we found ourselves in the middle of the sternoon near the top of one of the loftiest peaks and a good ten miles from camp. We had not intended to consume so much time over the traps, but had become so closely occupied as to fail to note companion's face.

The words were scarcely out when soveral flakes began to drift downward.

Our situation was truly an unenyiable one, on an exposed mountain-top with an altitude of more than 6,000 feet, a heavy altitude of more than 6,000 feet, a heavy snowstorm imminent, and the nearest human habitation at least six miles away. We had gone about 300 or 400 yards further, the storm increasing every moment, when suddenly we came square upon a small, comewhet dilapidated log cabin in a kind of hollowor cave at the very base of a to int site of prests, and so awallowed up in the dense gloom of the balsams that but for our almost stumbling up againstit it would have entirely escaped

I laughed to myself no little over his omewhat ludicrous appearance and open-method him several times in regard to the foolish fears and superstitions. But a is foolish fears and superstitions. But a noment later I turned almost faint with agment later I turned almost hant with corror as the fire, blazing up, showed me pool of blood directly beside me! It was of considerable size and freshly spilled. A cold shiver passed over me, and I felt my heart sink, if not literally flown to my boots, then very near to them, in my investigations.

As I was sitting directly between the norrible spot and my companion he did not see it, and with a feeling of devout hankfulners I managed, without exciting is suspicions, to cover it up with a ortion of the leaves we had piled near

As we were dispatching the remains of As we were displiciting the remains of our dinner my companion, not without considerable nervousness, however, and a white, exerced face with lips that accarcely pronounced the words above a whisper, related to me in lad the horrible story of the drink-maddened man who in a moment of frenzy had murdered his loving wife and innocent little haby.

By this time night had fairly actiled down upon us, and the darkness, easy where the dim glow of the fire rested, was impenetrable. The thick shadows envoloped us even where we sat, for, the fuel being poor, we had continually to cost our fire to burn, and were often with-

Buddenly—just ss my companion was describing to me the terrible headlong sprung upon his crouching wife—there came piercing through the thick wall of darkness behind us the startling distinct

I could divine his intention, dashed madly through the door and into the raging storm without.

It was truly a moment of horror, and my first impulse was to follow my wildly fleeing companion. But the next moment I realized the utter madness of facing such a storm in impenetrable darkness on a precipitous mountain side.

Easilize for my account I grashed it the same low moans, intermingled with the heavy soles of pain.

Groping my way to the corner of the cabin at the right of the fire place, I telimbed, by means of the chinks between the logs, as quickly as the darkness and my own safety would allow, to a long is shell I had previously noticed a considerable distance above the floor and but a tecuple of feet or so beneath the loft. And there upon my left side, with my face charmed toward the room below, and revolver in hand, I lay through the long ohours of the night.

The morning light showed me dead a upon the floor a huge panther, while a vecreful investigation of the cabin and its a surroundings by the same light fully

There is a family living in the interior of . Penneylvania who, for generations, have been set apart from the rest of the community. There is a popular idea that they are destined to good fortune. Their neighbors talk of the unfailing luck of the P—s; it is suspected that they are all "Mascottes."

business partners, as counsel, as physic-ians or pastors. Whatever may be his trade or occupation, the world always has a nice place ready for one of the P—s. Yet they do not as a race possess excep-tional intellectual strength or fortune. The one quality which distinguishes them from others is a capacity for security the The one quality which distinguishes them from others is a capacity for seeing the best of every incident of life and of making the best of that. This gives them a fine high courage in little or great lile, and an imperturbably aweet, sunny temper. It was one of this family who, upon losing both legs at the battle of Chancellorville, exclaimed, "What luck that it wasn't my arms!"

Another member of the family accom-

When the crew was reduced to starvation diet, "P—declared," says the record, "that the penunican was the finest flavored penunican he had ever known. Only his jokes and hopefulness kept us from despair."

The P—sare heirs to a great inheritance. Many other lagacies come to men from their ancestors; money, honorable position, keen wit, refined tastes, a genius for authorship, for executive work, for music, art or oratory. Some of these things no effort or labor will give to us if we are born if without them. But the resolute persistence in looking at the bright side of life, the sunny, kindly tomper, are within the reach of the most morose and billious man.

In vain I tried to remonstrate with him Like all the mountaineers, I found him possessed of no small amount of superstition.

"Nothin' good'il come o' hit, I tell ye!" he cried, almost frantically. One o' t'other o' us, mebbe both, 'll hev ter go et'swe ester that cusaid place."

He simally allowed himself to be led into the cabin, although I could plainly sees his superstitious fears were by no means allayed.

It was a double log cabin with a somewhat large front room and a much smaller back one divided by a thin partition. Overhead in the front room three was a loft reached by a ladder in the back room. Of this much I took note by the dim light then pervading the place. I would have continued my investigations but for the increase in the storm. By means of the leaves and dried twigs that had collected near one of the windows, and by tearing up the old ladder, which we found to be quite rotten, we soon had a fire kinded in the broad, fire place, for we had taken the precaution to provide ourselves with matches.

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no dount has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Bosche's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen, has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedican in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles, have perhaps, the largest sule of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size.

It was truly a moment of horror, and my first impulse was to follow my wildly fleeing companion. But the next moment trealized the utter madness of facing such a storm in impenetrable darkness on a precipitous mountain side.

Feeling for my revolver I grasped it firmly in one hand and groped my way to the fire-place with the other.

It was banked with snow!

In ext felt for a match in order to strike a light, and realized with horror that the last one in my possession had been used to start the fire. The terrible cries and cotatt the fire. The terrible cries and screams now momentarily increased, intermingled with low means and mysterious footsteps.

Suddenly I became aware that something or some one was stealthyly approach; large from some other reason does not thing or some one was stealthyly approach; large from some other reason does not the fare the form some other reason does not the fare the first and th G.MENDEL&CO 1124 MAIN STREET Have Opened an Elegant New Stock of FURNITURE! Suddenly I became aware that some-thing or some one was stealthly approach-ing the fireplace where I stood. The next moment two burning eyes, apparently fixed on me, glowed through the dark-ness. That it was a critical moment I felt in every vein and fiber.
